How is a Wellness Check done?

A wellness check is initiated like a help request using a web form. A wellness check will be treated like a help request but with a low priority in most cases. Wellness checks enable a person, not on site, to initiate a dispatch. Because the person making the request cannot be verified or the location validated, wellness checks are more likely to take a long time to complete and can only be submitted using a web form.

If someone needs help, they request it using the PubSafe mobile app so their location information is included.

The screenshot shows a web form for requesting help. The form is titled "Situation?" and includes several fields and a dropdown menu. The "Services Needed" dropdown menu is open, showing a list of options with checkboxes. A red arrow points to the "Wellness check" option. The form also includes fields for "Options", "Preferable Organization", "Disaster Event", "Reporter", "Reported By", "User Name", "Full Name", "Mobile Phone", "E-Mail", "Street", "City or Province", and "Country".
